Present
Energy: Art Meets Science
Using a Cross Disciplinary Approach to Unpack the New York State Arts Standards

Monday, October 21, 2019

This conference is a cross disciplinary exploration of the Museum's exhibit and will demonstrate how artists make visible a selection of scientific and mathematic principles illustrated in the work on view.

Ever since Leonardo DaVinci studied waves and clouds, artists have been fascinated by energy and scientists have been struck by the beauty of the images their instruments reveal. Jackson Pollock called his painting "energy and motion made visible." Combining paintings, drawings and sculpture with a wide range of scientific images and instruments from Brookhaven National Laboratory, the Tesla Museum and other sources, this show explores the nexus of art and science. Participants will also engage in a hands on art activity that combines discipline based word maps and visual elements as seen in the works on view.
